Marios Nicolaou

Obituary

Marios passed away on the 20th of October 2015.

We shall remember Marios as a very genuine, sincere and honest person, as a gentle, intelligent, fun-loving man.

In the world of training in creativity and related fields he was a professional with full mastery of his craft. His team workshops were full of energy, interactivity, and profound learning. They were forums of open conversation engaging people in meaningful dialogue and rich interpersonal exchange. And he always invented something new for each workshop. No wonder his clients asked him back again and again. He took his interactive training techniques to the courses he taught for trainee accountants and to the workshops he offered to young people from time to time, with much success.

We worked hard to offer our clients the very best training, consulting and facilitation and we all enjoyed learning from each other. We loved it when Marios had something new to teach us because we knew it would involve the whole mind and body and end in smiles and laughter.

Marios loved painting on paper on canvas and on the walls of childrens' rooms. His sketching and doodling served to generate new ideas, of which he was an inexhaustible source.

Many knew Marios as a dedicated triathlete and an Iron Man - one of very few who passed this gruelling test of physical endurance. His athleticism was always non-competitive.

Above all, Marios was a dedicated family man. He would often leave the office late morning to cook for his boys, Paris and Nicolas, and take them to their afternoon activities. And he always spoke with love and admiration about his wife, Haroulla. To his wife and children, his sisters and his parents we offer our deep condolences.

He shall be greatly missed by his colleagues in Performa.
